Clinical Procedures In Anesthesia And Intensive Care

Synopsis

A reference book of methods for any procedure that an anaesthesiologist and/or intensivist might conceivably do, or be required to be familiar with. The emphasis is on the practical and clinical aspect of each procedure. This work is divided into six sections; section one deals with preparation of an anaesthesia machine, ventilator and all other types of monitoring equipment used by anaesthesiologists, section two contains procedures related to the diagnosis and treatment of diseases of the respiratory system; section three contains procedures related to the cardiovascular system; sections four and five contain the important procedures related to the central and peripheral nervous systems, respectively; section six is a potpourri of genital, urinary, gastrointestinal, obstetrical and miscellaneous procedures.

Customer Reviews

Although now little outdated basically a good book about basic and advanced clinical procedures. I like the section with retrograde intubation, with approaches that I haven't encountered earlier. I recommend it to the anesthesiology residents who are about to approach their patients for the first time with invasive thoughts in their minds. :)
